It shows how to use Python and cyber security technology to preserve digital evidence. Since the 1980s, the agencies responsible for enforcing the law and criminal and civil law have used forensic informing as evidence. Some notable cases include the following: Apple commercial secret robbery. An engineer named Xiaolang Zhang in the Automobile Automobile Automobile Division of Apple announced his retirement and said that he would return to China to take care of him. He told his manager that he planned to work in an electronic automobile manufacturer in China, raising suspicions. According to an affidavit of the Federal Investigation Office (FBI), the Apple security team reviewed Zhang's activity on the company's network and found, in the days prior to its resignation, download commercial secrets of confidential databases of the company to which you had access. He was accused by the FBI in 2018. Enron. In one of the most mentioned accounting fraud, Enron, an American energy company, basic products and services, falsely reported billions of dollars in revenue before going to bankruptcy in 2001, causing Dai Financials to many employees and other people who had invested in the company, Computer's forensic analysts examined data terabytes to understand the fraud scheme complex. The scarce was an important factor in the approval of the 2002 Sarbanes-Oxley Law, which establishes new accounting compliance requirements for public companies. The company declared bankruptcy in 2001. Google's Secret Secret. Anthony Scott Leandowski, former executive of Uber and Google, was accused of 33 charges of commercial secret robbery in 2019. From 2009 to 2016, Levandowski worked on the program of from Google, where it downloaded thousands of files related to the program from a corporate server protected by password. He left Google and Otto believed, a truck self-conducting self-conducting that Uber bought in 2016, according to The New York Times. Levandowski pleaded guilty to a charge of theft of commercial secrets and was sentenced to 18 months in prison and $851,499 in fines and restitution. Levandowski received a presidential pardon in January 2021. Larry Thomas. Thomas shot and killed Rito Llamas-Juarez in 2016 Thomas was subsequently convicted with the help of hundreds of Facebook posts he made under the false name of Slaughtaboi Larro. One of the posts included a photo of him using a bracelet that was found at the crime scene. Michael Jackson. The researchers used metadata and medical documents from Michael Jackson's doctor's iPhone that showed the doctor, Conrad Murray, prescribed lethal amounts of medication to Jackson, who died in 2009. Mikayla Munn. Munn drowned his newborn baby in the bathtub of his dormitory at the University of Manchester in 2016. Researchers found Google searches on their computer that contained the phrase "abortion at home", which were used to condemn it. Murder is only one of the many types of crime computer forensics can help combat. Learn how forensic financial analysis software is used to combat fraud.
